

Journalism, storytelling and media literacy LEARNING MATERIALS AND RESOURCES

A range of UK broadcasters, publishers and media charities provide online resources relating to journalism skills, tips and tricks to produce creative content and advice about careers in the media industry.

The London Borough of Culture 'Welcome to Wandsworth' website includes short videos about local people from the borough who work in the creative industry and signposts some specific industries caterers information and opportunities for 13–24-year-olds who live, study or work in Wandsworth.

Details about free educator CPD opportunities are also available online here.
Sign up for our Creative Schools Newsletter: <https://bit.ly/CreativeWandsworthNewsletter>

BBC Bitesize 'Other Side of the Story' online video masterclasses, articles and interactive quizzes provide advice and tips to film, edit and produce podcasts, as well help navigate and use and create social media.

The range of job roles in the media and creative industries are also explored on the BBC Bitesize Careers website.

ScreenSkills is the industry-led body for the screen industries and offers e-learning and information about career pathways, training and bursary opportunities for UK film, TV, VFX, animation and gaming roles. The ScreenSkills podcast also takes you behind the screens of the screen industry.

School-specific resources about film, cinema and moving picture are available on the IntoFilm website and including film-streaming access and learning activities for use in the classroom about careers behind the camera. IntoFilm also runs a film club programme.

Wandsworth-based Chocolate Films is a production company that offers workshops for schools and young people and has some film-making video resources online.

Find out more about people working in the creative industry across Wandsworth here.

There are a range of free and subscription-based news literacy and journalism-specific programmes for KS2-3 students, including lesson plans and downloadable materials.

The Economist Education Foundation's Topical Talk materials include online resources to support discussions around current affairs and topical issue as well as media literacy and critical thinking learning activities.

The Leadership for Change: decode the news programme offers a six-lesson curriculum to help equip 10- to 16-year-olds with the critical-thinking and news literacy skills to help navigate mis- and disinformation.

Sky Up is the broadcaster's learning and outreach offer for 8–18-year-olds and schools can register to book free visits to the Sky Academy film and TV studios in Elstree and Sky Group HQ in west London.

The Edit is a free online digital programme supporting young people to create their own storytelling and fact and fictional video stories – a partnership between Sky and Adobe.

The Guardian Foundation offers journalism-focused learning programmes for both primary and secondary schools:

- NewsWise is an award-winning news literacy programme for 7–11-year-olds.
- Behind the Headlines is for secondary schools, higher education and youth groups – sessions can be virtual or in-person at the Education Centre located in the Guardian's central London head office.

BBC Bitesize Learn & Revision collections include online quizzes, study guides and revision content supporting GCSE syllabus' which features News writing learning resources featuring writing headlines, structuring news stories alongside Newsgathering and Interview Skills.